

Sixth Biennial Graduate Translation Conference “Performing Translation”

May 26–28, 2017 at The University of Texas at Dallas

Directions

The University of Texas at Dallas is located in Richardson, a suburb of Dallas, around 15 miles north of downtown Dallas. Since the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex is rather expansive, getting around without your own transportation can be a challenge, so when making your travel plans or if you are planning any activities outside of the conference, keep distances and travel times in mind.

See below for some information on how to get around and the easiest ways to travel to/from UT Dallas and the two airports. For further information, you can refer to <http://www.utdallas.edu/directions/>.

Car

Those who are renting a car or arriving in their own cars will have access to free parking near Residence Hall North. Information about parking will be provided at residence hall check-in. The address of Residence Hall North is 950 N Loop Road, Richardson, TX.

The driving time from both airports is around 30 minutes, although if you are getting in at peak rush hour times, you can of course expect delays.

Public transportation

You can reach UT Dallas by public transportation from both DFW airport and Love Field airport, but you can expect the trip time in each case to be around 2 hours. From DFW airport, you can take the DART Orange Line the CityLine/Bush station, where you will change to the 883-UTD Shuttle bus line that will take you to campus. From Love Field airport, you will take the 524 bus to the Inwood/Love Field station, and change to the DART Orange Line there.

A local DART day pass costs $5.00. For times and details, you can check Google Maps or <http://www.dart.org/>.

Taxi/Rideshare

Taxi fares to the UTD campus are generally around $60 from DFW and $40 from Love Field, not including tips.

Both Uber and Lyft are available from DFW and Love Field airports. Average trip cost from DFW should be around $40, from Love Field around $25, although prices and availability can obviously vary during peak times, as of course can travel times. There are other transportation options available, including car services or shared airport shuttles, although most of these need to be booked in advance.
